Critical thinking

a) All children have the right to quality education. How can we ensure this right to every child? Discuss the role of the government and the parents to make sure that every child can attend School

Ans Every child deserves access to quality education. To ensure this, the government should provide free and compulsory education, build schools in rural areas, and supply scholarship for underprivileged children. Parent must play their role by sending their children to school instead of involving them in household or field work. They should equally value the education of sons and daughters. Joint efforts of government, parents, and society can guarantee that every child ~~attains~~ attends school and secures a better future.

b) Do you think that there is still discrimination between sons and daughters in terms of providing education in our country? What strategies do you suggest to overcome such discrimination against girls?

Ans. Yes, in many places, daughters are still treated unequally in education. Parents sometimes prefer to educate their sons, believing girls will only manage households after marriage. To overcome this, awareness programs must highlight the importance of girl's education. Scholarships and incentives for girls should be expanded. Strict laws against discrimination must be enforced. Above all, parents should change their mindset and realize that educating daughters is equally important for family, community, and national development.

Writing

a) Recall your school days. Write in three paragraphs of an event that you always remember.

Ans One of the most memorable events of my school life was the inter-school football tournament. Our school had been practicing for weeks, and the excitement was very high. The ground was filled with students and teachers cheering loudly for their teams. I was selected as a midfielder, and it was my first time playing in such a big match. Everyone was very ~~excit~~ excited, and I could feel my heartbeat racing as the referee blew the whistle. Every pass, tackle, and shot made the game more thrilling, and the support from the crowd gave us great motivation.

The turning point came in the last few minutes when our team managed to score the winning goal. The joy of that moment is beyond words. We all ~~de~~ celebrated together, lifting our school's flag with pride. That football match taught me the value of teamwork, discipline, and never giving up until the last second.

b) "Education empowers a person". Elaborate this statement giving examples of your personal experience.

Ans "Education empowers a person" means education gives strength, knowledge and the ability to face life's challenges. An educated person can make better decisions, understand rights and responsibilities, and live a respectful life. Education develops confidence and helps individuals earn a livelihood. For example, without education, one may struggle even to get a job, but with education, one can build a secure future.

In my own experience, education has given me courage and vision. I used to be shy in expressing my thoughts, but learning in school has improved my communication. It has also made me aware of social issues like inequality and discrimination, inspiring me to contribute to positive changes. Education has empowered me to dream bigger and to work for those dreams with confidence.

Thus, education is not only a source of knowledge but also the key to personal and social transformation.
