

First Terminal Examination - 2079

Class : XI

Subject: C. English (0031)

Full Marks: 75

Time: 3 hrs.

SET A

Pass Marks: 30

Candidates are required to give their answers in their own words as far as practicable. The figures in the margin indicate full marks.

Attempt all the questions.

1. Read the text and do the tasks. (15)

Like all our other senses, our sense of justice also has ancient evolutionary roots. Human morality was shaped in the course of millions of years of evolutions, adapted to dealing with the social and ethical dilemmas that cropped up in the lives of small hunter-gathered bands. If I went hunting with you and I killed a deer while you caught nothing, should I share my booty with you? If you went gathering mushrooms and came back with a full basket, does the fact that I am stronger than you allow me to snatch all these mushrooms for myself? And if I know that you plot to kill me, is it OK to act pre-emptively and slit your throat in the dark of night?

On the face of things, not much has changed since we left the African savannah for the urban jungle. One might think that the questions we face today – the Syrian civil war, global inequality, global warming – are just the same old questions writ large. But that is an illusion. Size matters, and from the standpoint of justice, like many other standpoints, we are hardly adapted to the world in which live.

The problem is not one of values. Whether secular or religious, citizens of the twenty-first century have plenty of values. The problem is with implementing these values in a complex global world. It's all the fault of numbers. The foragers' sense of justice was structured to cope with dilemmas relating to the lives of hundreds of people living in close proximity. When we try to comprehend relations between millions of people across entire continents, our moral sense is overwhelmed.

Justice demands not only a set of abstract values, but also an understanding of concrete cause-and-effect relations. If you collected mushrooms to feed your children and I now take that basket of mushrooms forcefully, meaning that all your work has been for naught and your children will go to sleep hungry, that is unfair. It's easy to grasp this, because it's easy to see the cause-and-effect relations. Unfortunately, an inherent feature of our modern global world is that its causal relations are highly ramified and complex. I can live peacefully at home, never raising a finger to harm anyone, and yet according to left-wing activists, I am a full partner to the wrongs inflicted by Israeli soldiers and settlers in the West Bank. According to the socialist, my comfortable life is based on child labour in dismal Third World sweatshops. Animal-welfare advocates remind me that my life is interwoven with one of the most appalling crimes in history – the subjugation of billions of farm animals to a brutal regime of exploitation.

Am I really to blame for all that? It's not easy to say. Since I depend for my existence on a mind-blogging network of economic and political ties, and since global causal connections are so tangled, I find it difficult to answer even the simplest questions, such as where my lunch comes from, who made the shoes I'm wearing, and what my pension fund is doing with my money.

A. Choose the best answer.

(5×1=5)

- i. The phrase “cropped up” in the passage is closest in meaning to
 - a. neglected
 - b. cared
 - c. opened
 - d. happened
- ii. The idiom “writ large” in the passage is closest in meaning to
 - a. similar
 - b. different
 - c. similar but larger or more obvious
 - d. same
- iii. The word “standpoint” in the passage is closest in meaning to
 - a. worries
 - b. pressures
 - c. stolen goods
 - d. attitude
- iv. The word “naught” in the passage is closest in meaning to
 - a. everything
 - b. plenitude
 - c. nothing
 - d. abundance
- v. The word “pre-emptively” in the passage is closest in meaning to
 - a. preventively
 - b. stealthily
 - c. aggressively
 - d. slyly

B. Fill in the blanks with NO MORE THAN THREE WORDS.

(5×1=5)

- a. was shaped in the course of millions of years of evolutions.
- b. Citizens of twenty-first century have
- c. The foragers' sense of justice was structured to cope with relating to the lives of hundreds of people living in close proximity.

- d. Justice demands an understanding of as well.
- e. When we try to between millions of people, our moral sense is overwhelmed.

C. Write True, False or Not Given. (5×1=5)

- a. Luckily today's world has extremely advanced casual relations as an ingrained feature.
- b. The socialist argue that the author's comfortable life is the result of child labour in small factories in developing nations.
- c. Animal-welfare advocates remind me that my life is interwoven with the subjugation of billions of farm animals to a brutal regime of exploitation.
- d. The author thinks that he is to blame for everything that happens in the world.
- e. Humans will learn to adapt to new environment.

2. Write short answers to the following questions. (5×2=10)

- a. What positive changes have occurred on Earth after the speaker's visit? (Corona Says)
- b. Draw the character sketch of the Giant? (The Selfish Giant)
- c. Who preserve and pass the oral tradition? (Sharing Tradition)
- d. What is the central theme of the poem Corona Says?
- e. What can you infer about the speaker's devotion to his beloved from the following lines? (A Red, Red Rose)
And I will come again, my love,
Tho' it were ten thousand mile!

3. Write long answers to the following questions. (2×5=10)

- a. What are the four major problems developed by LaPena with regard to maintaining the oral tradition? (Sharing Tradition)
- b. Paraphrase the poem Corona Says into prose form.

4. Write a descriptive paragraph about your hometown. Identify different places which are full of scenic beauty, and use descriptive phrases to make the readers feel as if they are roaming around there.

Word limit: 150 (7)

5. Write a letter to your friend telling him about your childhood friend who you miss the most. Word limit: 180 (8)

6. Some teachers think that the best way to punish disruptive students is asking them to leave their class. Do you think this is an ideal way to deal with such students? If not, what other strategies can be applied?

Word limit: 250-300

(10)

7. Rewrite the following sentences as instructed. (10×1=10)

- He is the CEO of the company. (Underline the preposition in the sentence.)
- The scissors (is/are) lying on the floor. (Choose the correct verb from the brackets to complete the sentence.)
- The ethics (is/are) are much debated. (Choose the correct verb from the brackets to complete the sentence.)
- How often (you/read) a newspaper? (Put the verb into the correct form.)
- He seems extremely happy. (Underline the adjective in the sentence.)
- My dad is working in the field. (Underline the verbs in the sentence.)
- The man has already chosen his major subject. (Identify the adverb in the sentence.)
- My brother speaks fluently. (Place the underlined word in the right position.)
- My friend died cancer. (Fill in the blank with the appropriate preposition.)
- She is very good geography. (Fill in the blank with the appropriate preposition.)

8. Do as instructed.

(5×1=5)

- august /ɔ:ˈgʌst/ adj. [usually before noun] (formal) impressive, making you feel respect
How is the word ‘august’ pronounced?
- Arrange the following words in alphabetical order.
cordite corduroy corner cord
- What does the sentence ‘I got the news straight from the horse’s mouth.’ mean?
 - I saved the paper that the horse was about to chew.
 - I got the news from the person who has direct personal knowledge of it.
- Write the present participle and the past participle of the verb ‘sew’
- Make two words by using the prefix ‘de-’.

❧ - The End - ❧